Art and Design

"The color and the obvious emotion so tied up in the work just demand attention," says David Sutherland of Sam Glankoff's modernist transfer paintings (above, untitled, 1975). To give Glankoff's oeuvre the attention it deserved, Sutherland teamed with Wendy Snyder, director and archivist of the Sam Glankoff Collection, to mount the artist's first West Coast exhibition in Sutherland's Los Angeles showroom. Seventeen original pieces by Glankoff (1894-1982), who worked most of his life in self-imposed obscurity, will be displayed through October.
